Mean "..... 12.0 " "

PHENOMENON.

Two aurora twilights.

RAIN.

Fell on two days during four hours, and to a total depth of 0.25 in.

REMARKS.

Barometer pressure quickly and considerably decreased on the 21st, and remained low throughout the week,—the result being a strong gale on the 22nd, up to a maximum velocity of 4.66 miles per hour, the continued low pressure giving strong winds to the end of the week, with a slight fall of rain. The mean velocity of the wind was unusually high.

The temperature showed a gradual increase from last week. Hail fell on the 26th for a few minutes.

The crops are looking well, wheat particularly so.

W. G. WRIGHT.

The Bad Day Again.

"I was over at the dairy farm at the Exposition Building Saturday night," said the bad boy to the grocery man, "and when they were breaking up me and my chum helped to carry boxes of cheese and hickies of butter, and the cheeseman gave each of us a piece of Limburger cheese wrapped up in tin foil. Sunday morning I opened my piece, and it made me tired. It was the awfulest smell I ever heard of. It was just like an old back number funeral. Pa and ma were just getting ready for church and I cut off a piece of cheese and put one inside of pa's vest and I put another inside of ma's muff, and they went to church. I went down to church too, and sat on the bench. I was taking up a collection. The church was pretty warm, and by the time they got to singing the first hymn pa's cheese began to smell a race against ma's cheese. Pa held one side of the hymn book and ma held the other, and pa always sings for all that is out, and when he traced himself and sang, "Just as I am," Ma thought pa's voice was tinged with bitterness, and she looked at him and hunched him and told him to stop singing and breathe through his nose 'cause his breath was enough to stop a clock. Pa stopped singing and turned around kind of cross towards ma, and then he smelled ma and turned round the other way and said, "Whew" and they didn't sing any more but looked at each other although they smelled frowsey. When they sat down they sat as far apart as they could get, and pa sat near a woman who used to be a nurse in a hospital, and when she smelled pa's cheese she thought he had small-pox, and she held her handkerchief to her nose. The man in the other end of the pew that ma sat near, he was a stranger from Racine, who belongs to our church, he looked at ma's sort of queer and after the minister had prayed and got up to sing again the man took up his hat and went out.

Well sir, before the sermon was over everybody in the part of the church had their handkerchiefs to their noses, and wiped the perspiration off his face he said he would go to the trustees after meeting, as there was business of importance to transact. He said the question was of ventilation and sewerage for the church was unusually full of sewer gas. He said he was a meek and humble follower of the Lamb, and was willing to cast his lot wherever the Master decided, but he would be that if he would preach any longer in a church that smelt like a home-boiling establishment. Everybody looked at everybody else, and pa looked as though he knew where the sewer gas came from, and ma looked at pa real mad.

Ma and my chum lit out, and I went home and distributed my cheese all around, and I cut a slice in ma's bureau drawer, down under her clothes; and a piece in the bath room under the bed and a slice in the album on the parlor table, and dropped a piece under the range in the kitchen. I tell you the house was loaded. Ma came home from church first, and when I asked where pa was, she said she hoped he had gone to walk around a block to air himself. Pa came home to dinner and when he got a smell of the house he opened all the doors, and ma put a comfortable around her shoulders, and told pa he was a disgrace to civilization. She tried to get pa to drink some carotid acid.

Pa finally convinced ma that it was not him, and then they decided that it was the house that smelled so, as well as the church, and all the afternoon they went visiting, and next morning pa went down to the health office, and got the inspector of nuisances to come up to the house, and when he smelt around a spell, he said there were dead rats in the main sewer pipe and they called for plumbers, and he went out to his neighbors to borrow some fresh air, and when the plumbers began to dig up the floor in the basement I came over here. If they had any of that Limburger cheese it will go hard with me, but I guess I will go over to the house and stand in the back door and listen to the mocking bird. If you see me flying out of the alley with my coat-tail full of bugs, you can bet that they have discovered the sewer gas.

Her First Essay.

There is always a charm about the first successful attempt at anything. When the child first catches the idea of how to "tell time," when the boy cracks out the right answer to his first hard problem in algebra, there is a thrill of delight which will rarely be forgotten. There are many stories told of the delight of authors at first seeing their work in print. Miss Martineau gives the following account of her first literary venture. "I wrote away," she says, "in my abominable scrawl of the 30 days, on foolscap paper, feeling very much like a fool all the while. I told no one what I was doing, and carried my expensive packet to the postoffice myself, to pay the postage.

"The time was very near the end of the month. I had no definite expectation that I should ever hear anything of my paper, and certainly did not expect it could be in the forthcoming number of the publication to which I sent it.

"That number was sent in before service time on a Sunday morning. My heart may have been beating when I laid my hands on it; but it thumped prodigiously when I saw my article there, and in notices to correspondents a request to hear more from the writer.

"There is certainly something entirely peculiar in the sensation of one's self in print for the first time. The lines burn themselves in upon the brain in a way of which black ink is incapable in any other mode. So I felt that day when I read about my first success.

"My brother had asked me to take his house that evening, and taking up the magazine he began to read my article, saying: Ah, this is a good hand. They have had nothing so good as this for a long while, and what a fine sentence that is! Why, Harriet, what is the matter with you? I never knew you so slow to praise anything before.

I never could baffle anybody. The truth is that article is mine.

"When I rose to go he laid his hand on my shoulder and said, gravely:

Now, dear, leave it to other women to make shirts and darn stockings. Do you devote yourself to this.

"I went home in a sort of dream, so that the squares of the pavement seemed to float before my eyes. That evening made me an authoress."

On Canvas.

It is not surprising that pictures, with all their attraction for eye and mind, are to many honest and intelligent people, a much of a riddle to be altogether pleasant. What with the oranges of self constituted aptitudes of taste, the discrepancies of popular writers on the jargon of common-sense, the varieties of fashion, the endless theories about color, style, chiaroscuro, composition, design, imitation, nature, schools, etc., painting has become rather a subject of vanity and the exercise of scholastic dogmatism, than a genuine source of sympathy and admiration. In music, literature and intellectual recreations it is not the right presumption, to assert and enjoy individual taste, the least independent followers will bravely advocate their favorite composer or the book which has interested them; but when a picture is the subject of discussion, how have the moral courage to say what they think; there is a self-interest of one's own impressions, and even convictions, in regard to what is represented on canvas that may interfere, where there are no other considerations, with the appreciation of pictures as such, and not of principles of art, but of the elements of nature.

Some Men's Luck.

And this was the story we told the Chicago man: "Yes, sir, there's a man in New York who was born drunk. Both his parents were hard drinkers. From the moment he came into the world he was born in a state of beastly intoxication, though he has never touched a drop of liquor." The Chicago man listened with great interest. "Does he feel drunk and act drunk all the time?" he eagerly asked. "He does," we replied. There was a sad, chastened, far-away look in the Chicago man's eyes as he murmured: "Some men have dead loads on 'em."

A party that has been in the Northwest for some time, and is about to return, where they will take the Atlantic Central R.R. for London, Toronto and Montreal.
The Michigan Central route was selected because it is the best to take from Chicago to Canada points.
This line runs five express trains daily from Chicago to Canada (three on weekdays) and two of them, the 3:15 p.m. and 8:15 p.m. trains, are accompanied by sleeping cars. A special Sleeping Car runs from Chicago to the 8:15 p.m. train, and the other trains have the new cars to Canadian points. Through tickets are on sale to all these points, and baggage will be checked through.

LAND COMPANY'S

Free Grant & Purchase Lands

This company is now prepared to locate any number of settlers on homesteads and pre-emption, and will sell to those who wish to purchase on the most favorable terms.

FREE GRANT LANDS

are disposed of on exactly the same terms as if coming direct from the Government. The Company's lands are in a direct line of a railway now under construction, and are being made as easy of access to the settler as possible. Steamers of the Northwest Navigation Company will run regularly to Strathallan and beyond.

For further particulars apply to MESSRS. DRUMMOND, FISHER & CO.,

Agent, Strathallan.

A. T. DRUMMOND,
Managing Director.

N. B.—Intending settlers will do well to bear in mind that the above company's lands are of the best quality, as well as having plenty of wood and water upon them, a great advantage over land now attainable on the line of the C. P. R., and that the cost of reaching them will be considerably less, as that road, which can be had at Strathallan on favorable terms from the company.

Snatch a Moment's Leisure.

You are tired—have been working too steadily; then take rest. Put on less steam when you are at work. Snatch a Sunday now and then from the middle of the week. You can't? You can. People find time to be sick and to die. These can just as easily find time to rest and keep well. All does not depend on finishing that dress or fencing that field, or putting up so much fruit, or catching so many customers. Better that the children should wear old clothes than that the mother should be laid aside by a fever. Put up the store shutters earlier; prepare plainer meals in the kitchen. To a noonday nap treat yourself, and give your employees a chance to go pleasuring of an afternoon now and then. That only is duty which the Lord lays upon us, and he is not so hard a master as we sometimes suppose.

Not Very Much.

[Detroit Free Press.]

A young man with a nose like a razor and an eye which would have raised a blister on sheet-iron on a hot day halted a pedestrian on Gratiot avenue and stated that he was trying to raise money to reach the bedside of his dying aunt in Chicago. He was to proud to beg, but if the citizen would give him a quarter he would show him a trick worth five dollars.

"Vvas ish dot drink?" queried the citizen.

"It is to make ten cents go futher than a dollar. You can play it on the boys and make ten dollars a day."

"My frendt, I neder blays mit der boy."

"Yes, but you can have lots of fun, you know."

"I vvas no haudit for fun. If I offer git off some shokes I neder laff."

"Yes, but this is something new. When you come down to the grocery of an evening you—"

"I don't come down. I vvas home en der sheeps all der earnings."

"But you could have a little fun with your neighbors."

"I told you I vvas not a funny man. I likes th schmoke und read der morning papers."

"Well, I don't want to beg, and I am offering you this trick very low in order to get home and see my sister die. Have you a dying sister?"

"I don't expect I have. Vvas ish dot drinks?"

"To make ten cents go futher than a dollar."

"Und vhill she do it?"

"She will."

"Und five cents goes more ash half a dollar?"

"Und so."

"Und a cent goes better ash a dime?"

"That's the ratio."

"Und nottings at all goes better ash five cents?"

"I—I—I think it does."

"Vhill, you shust consider you haf all der nottings der was und you vhill bein Chicago to-morrow! Git ray love to dot dying sister und tell her dot you saw me well. You'd better git some express wagons to draw dese nickels down to der railroad, und you look a leedle outt for some Dutchmans who has been eating grass und vvas green!"

President Harrison's Charge.

Many of our old readers can recall the given cast over the nation by the death of President Harrison. He was the first President who had died in office. His administration had endured but "one little month."

It was reported that he had been killed by the hordes of politicians who beset him day and night, clamoring for offices. His successor, Vice President Tyler, was unknown to the country, and there were many fears that the Whigs would not gather the fruits of their great political victory.

Newspapers appeared in mourning lines, churches and public buildings were draped with emblems of woe, and clergymen preached funeral discourses. It was a day of great mourning in the nation.

The report that the politicians had killed the President had a basis of fact. The importunities had so overtaxed his physical powers that he was unable to resist an attack of pneumonia.

He was an early riser, and used to go to market. The spring was cold and stormy, but the President would not wear an overcoat. One morning he was wet by a shower, but refused to change his clothes. Pneumonia seized him the next day.

Washington life, with its late hours and ravenous office-seekers, had enfeebled the old man accustomed to the simple life and early hours of his plait Ohio home.

He became delirious. His broken expressions showed that the politicians had overburdened him.

"My dear madam," he would say, "I did not direct that your husband should be turned out. I did not know it. I tried to prevent it."

"It is wrong!" he exclaimed at another time. "I won't consent; it is unjust."

"These applications—will they never cease?"

His last words seemed addressed to his successor. Clearing his throat, he said with distinctness, "Sir, I wish you to understand the true principles of the Government. I wish them carried out. I ask nothing more."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Toronto Globe Reporter recently entertained Dr. Wilson, of the Toronto University and obtained from him a good deal of information regarding the present status of the University, which the Globe publishes. Toronto University men who may be in this part of the Dominion will be pleased to know that their Alma Mater is to be strengthened by many additions which the friends of the University intend to have made probably during the present year. Among other things Dr. Wilson told the reporter that.

The plan proposed by some of the Globe's friends in the Province was hayonets, built with an occasional blast from a brass band. How much more sensible a quiet talk over provincial rights amongst the various executives than the howling and insensate crusade projected by Messrs. Greenway, Sifton, Hay and Burnham. The result of the provincial election has unmistakably shown. It is a consolation to know now that we shall have an interprovincial conference in spite of the ridicule with which the Free Press has assailed the proposal.

The Toronto Globe does not take kindly to the proposed interprovincial conference. The Globe's position in this respect is superior to that of the Gilt contemporary in Winnipeg, the Free Press. The Globe remarks that, "It was filling what the first official suggestion of such an interprovincial Convention should come from the Province which has suffered most deeply from Federal usurpation. We take it for granted that the governments of the other provinces will hasten to accept the invitation of Manitoba so soon as it is formally tendered. The need of revision of the Federal Compact is at the present time more imperative than ever was the need of the compact itself."

Emerson and West Lynne are about to join hands across the canal of a river which separates them, and the friendly grasp across the gory chasm is to set at rest many of the doubtful questions of future growth and advancement. A joint committee composed of leading citizens of both towns and including the Mayors of both towns and three councilors from each town have drafted a basis of union which is likely to be acceptable to the people of both towns, and it is probable that a bill founded on this basis will be introduced at the present session of the Local Legislature and a charter granted. Two cities at the Boundary Line directly opposite each other would not flourish. By amalgamating both towns the nucleus of a prosperous city in the future is made. The new city is to have six aldermen, three from each side of the river, and an alderman for each ward, the mayor is to be elected at large. Local jealousies and petty cliques will be swept away by this new departure, and the city of Emerson will follow in the wake of the city of Brandon as the third city of the province.

It seems to us that the more the General Government mixes itself up in the liquor license question, the more confused and conflicting the whole aspect becomes. In the North-West Territory where there is no provincial machinery, it is necessary there, for obvious and well sustained reasons, for the Dominion Government to deal with the subject entirely, but in the provinces it seems to be an interference. There are many things which are best managed by provincial and municipal government, and we honestly believe that the liquor license question is one. When a general government begins to meddle in matters of that kind there is no knowing where it is going to pause; if it has the power to regulate liquor licenses, why not all other kind of licenses? This will be followed, besides licenses generally are subjects that are best dealt with by provincial legislation and municipal co-operation.

One of the greatest difficulties we have is to secure able and experienced examiners. Many of our best graduates now fill situations as principals and head-masters of Collegiate Institutes and High Schools; but owing to the jealousy entertained lest they should possibly favor their own former pupils we are precluded from engaging their services as examiners. From a somewhat similar feeling, all professors who have a seat in the Senate are disqualified. No class of men are so fit to perform the duty of examiners as experienced teachers and I consider it a great evil, which has resulted from the separation of the University of Toronto into two distinct corporations of a University and College, that examination is divorced to an injurious extent from the teaching. Any system which leads a student to expect an examination mainly based on textbooks, instead of on teaching, must inevitably tend to "strain" it does injustice to the highest class of honour men in their competitions for honours and prizes by subjecting them at times to very inadequate tests of their proficiency; it does still more injury to idlers by encouraging them to neglect lecture as of secondary value in the University Examination Hall. Examinations are not without their value as an adjunct to teaching but a substitute for lectures and practical illustration, they are not only worthless, but mischievous.

THE PUBLISHER OF THE NEW YORK HERALD.

A New York correspondent says: "Speaking of William Henry, it may be said that his office is the smallest occupied by any business man in the city. When you enter the Herald publication office, which is invariably crowded, you see a nook in the corner labeled 'Superintendent.' Rapping at the tiny window a head soon appears, and, as you get a glance at the interior, you wonder how it got in, and are still more surprised that it should be attached to a body. There is, however, room enough for a slim man like William Henry to turn in, but it will never do for him to become stout. This, I think, was the trouble in the case of his predecessor, Tom Cash, who got too fat and had to leave. More business is done, however, in this little nook than in the same area in the world. William Henry is an extraordinary business man, and does not need much office room, since he carries everything in his head. He is a native of Glasgow, and has been connected with the Herald from boyhood. His position in the establishment was such, indeed, that twelve years ago, when the senior Bennett made his will, he was one of the witnesses. Henry's salary is $200 per week, which he fully earns, since he attends to the publication of that colossal journal. During Bennett's voyage to the Canaries he was utterly deprived of any advice from the Herald, and this continued until he reached the French coast, whither files of his paper were sent. Chamberlain, his private secretary, must have had a laborious task to inspect forty copies of the Herald in his usually careful manner. This has been his task ever since his appointment, and he knows at a glance what should be submitted to his master's special notice."

Moorish Life.

For traveling there are, of course, neither carriages nor roads; the roads, so called, are collections of mule and camel tracks. Till within two or three years ago there was not a single wheeled vehicle in Morocco; but now there are known to be two—the one is a yellow antediluvian gig, which the sultan has procured somehow or other, and which figured some time ago in a state procession, to the astonishment and delight of the spectators; the other is a wheelbarrow, which a gentleman recently took to Mogador, and of which the stalwart Moor, to whom it was consigned so little surmised the use that when he had filled it with mortar according to instructions, he promptly shouldered it and strode off! Traveling muleback, however, in the large, well-padded saddles of the country, with stirrups like slippers, is no great hardship to either man or woman, and the way is constantly beguiled by some fresh illustration of Moorish life and manners; a company of noisy country-folk going to or coming from market; a troop of horsemen dashing past, with flowing white pelabes; the ghostly-looking silent cavalcade of an Arab Sheik of the plains, and his harem, swathed from view all but, perhaps, one lustrous eye; the astonished rustic girls, who hide her face but not her legs; or the toilsome, almost naked peasant dawdling along behind his aboriginal plow. A goat and a donkey may often be seen yoked together; and a woman has been seen in the place of a goat; but whatever the team, the plowing is always the same—a mere scratching of the soil, and yet it brings forth in abundance.

A post office is to be established at Moose Jaw on the first of June, with Mr. John R. Whitman as postmaster.

WAGER $500.00

To Whom it May Concern.

During the thunderstorm in August, 1882, the County of Middlesex, Ont., alone suffered to the extent of from $50,000 to $75,000 in the destruction of dwellings, barns and out-buildings. Not one of the structures consumed was furnished with rods from the Globe Lightning Rod Company of London, although there are thousands and their rods of fact of our rods erected upon the farm houses and barns in Middlesex Co., and over 10,000 being erected within the city limits alone during the past two years, the statements of a few witnesses to the contrary notwithstanding. The Globe Company, in order to show their confidence in the goods manufactured and sold by them, are prepared to place the sum of $500.00 in the hands of His Worship the Mayor (or any other responsible citizen in London) against a similar amount of deposited by any person or persons who can prove that a building provided with suitable rods from the Globe Company has been struck during either of the recent thunderstorms which have visited Western Ontario. The money to be divided between the different charitable institutions in London. Orders by mail promptly attended to.

THE CALFIES MISTAKE.

One day Calfie in the orchard
Heard a crow call "caw, caw, caw!"
"That sounds worse," said little Calfie,
"Than when I cry for my ma!"

Next day Calfie in the orchard
Heard a red bird's sweet trilling ring.
"Cuckoo, cuckoo," cried little Calfie,
"How that crow has learned to sing!"

"If the birds can learn so quickly
To sing sweetly, I can, too."
So that funny little Calfie
Loud began to call "moo! moo!"

Fast then mother cow came running,
All the sheep ran from their pens,
Farmers, wife and sons and daughters,
Came old rooster and his hens.

And they cried, "Oh, what's the matter,
Calfie, that you call so loud?"
Calfie trotted off quite gayly,
"I won't sing for such a crowd."

"Oh, you funny little Calfie,"
Cried they, "silly little thing!"
And well laugh and keep on laughing
When we think how queer you sing."

Left-Handed Tibbatts.

Some years ago, in Kentucky, two lawyers, friends and relatives, but of opposite politics, offered themselves for Congress in the same district.

The Whig candidate was W. W. Southgate, the Democratic, T. W. Tibbatts. Both had talent, wit and the ability to please the people. In the more important parts of the district they battled honorably and as accomplished orators. But in those regions where the people were ignorant, they used force at each other, and made the people laugh.

It happened that in one of these "dark" regions both had made such a favorable impression that public sentiment was about equally divided. One party cried, "Hurrah for Southgate!" and the other, "Hurrah for Tibbatts!" The people remained, after the departure of the candidates, to enjoy a dance.

When the two politicians had ridden about a mile, Tibbatts suddenly discovered that he had left something behind, and, asking Southgate to wait for him, rode back. Southgate, distrusting his own judgment, waited a while and then rode on. Tibbatts, playing the role of the people dancing, seemed to be in favor of Southgate, who played with his left hand.

Southgate, who also played the violin, and Tibbatts, who played the fiddle, both with a right hand, told the dancers that they were to have a contest. Tibbatts, who had divided the people, and even, throwing it down, he played in the dance, all the hurrahs were for him.

The next day Southgate was taken sick and for two weeks Tibbatts had the field to himself. Southgate, on recovering, found this opponent's canvass, but found that his rival's stories and violin playing had won the hearts of the voters.

In the place they refused to hear Southgate, even. "Tibbatts is our man!" they cried. "Tibbatts is our man!" Tibbatts, who had divided the people, and even, throwing it down, he played in the dance, all the hurrahs were for him.

"Tibbatts is our man!" said Southgate, "Tibbatts is our man!" Tibbatts, who had divided the people, and even, throwing it down, he played in the dance, all the hurrahs were for him.

OLD taverns frequented by Dr. John son or Mr. Tennyson, are sure of the Americans' custom, though a sadder imposture than the public house, with a few traditions and a monotony of leathern chops, does not exist.—London World.

DR. JOHN RAE does not hold the common opinion that the Esquimaux are a diminutive race. He is inclined to think that they are fully as tall as the average native of London, and much heavier. The women, when young, he says, are very pleasant-looking, almost pretty, extremely solid and compact, with small feet and hands, and well-formed limbs. As to strength, he found that the Esquimaux could lift 400 to 500 pounds with ease.

LAFAYETTE'S GRAVE.

Where Rest the Remains of America's Friend Indeed and in Need.

(Edward King, in the Boston Journal.)

The private cemetery where the remains of Lafayette are deposited is in the Rue de Piepus, No. 15, at the extremity of the Faubourg Saint Antoine, in Paris. The entrance is through a spacious court, the buildings of which are occupied by a religious community, and at the bottom of which is a modest-looking chapel. A large garden, covered with fruit trees, shrubs and plants, is next crossed, and a long alley of lime-trees, bordered with a hedge of yew-trees, then leads to the inclosure reserved for the cemetery. The latter is surrounded with walls, and represents an oblong square, into which there are three entrances by as many gates. It contains but two rows of mausoleums, belonging to distinguished families—those of de Noailles, de Grammont, de Montaigne, Destillier, Proteau, Gony-d'Aray, Rosambo, Lamoignon, de Perigord, etc. The two rows of tombs are separated by a gravel path, at the extremity of which is a stone cross. At the southeast angle of the ground is the place reserved for Lafayette and his family.

The tomb of Lafayette, which is surrounded with an iron railing, is but little higher than the ground, and is composed of two large black marble tablets, slightly inclined, and forming a very oblique angle. Upon this angle is a little cross, the lateral branches of which extend on both sides of the monument that covers the remains of both husband and wife as with a roof.

The following is the arrangement of the tablets, with the inscriptions on them, in letters of gold.

M. A. F. Lafayette Né à Paris le 21 Nov. 1783 Mort le 20 Juin 1834 M. J. P. R. Y. G. D. Lafayette Né à Paris le 21 Nov. 1783 Mort le 20 Juin 1834	M. J. P. R. Y. G. D. Lafayette Né à Paris le 21 Nov. 1783 Mort le 20 Juin 1834

The ground reserved for Lafayette's family also contains the tomb of Col. Lasterie, the General's son-in-law, and that of Mme. Grammont's sons. A slab of white marble placed on the wall at the bottom bears an inscription relative to the death of one of Lafayette's grandchildren, Mme. de Paris, whose maiden name was Mautour.

Behind the wall next to Lafayette's tomb are cypresses and some poplars. One of the latter, the emblem of death, seems to abandon its withered branches to the wind, thus adding to the melancholy aspect of this field of rest. The soil on which these trees stand covers the remains of a number of victims of the reign of terror, among whom are some of Mme. Lafayette's nearest relatives.

Mme. Lafayette having expressed a desire to be buried in this spot, her wishes were respected, and the observance of them ultimately decided the burial-place of her husband.

The tomb of Lafayette, unostentatious, like those of his friends, Washington and Franklin, is daily visited by many who honor his memory, by strangers who have known him, and by those who regret that they were deprived of that happiness. A register, which is deposited with the porter of the cemetery, is filled with the names of the visitors.

A TWO-EDGED sort of a girl: She (bewitchingly)—"Oh, I am so glad you are going to see me to my carriage, Mr. Browne!" He (flattered)—"Indeed, and may I ask why?" She—"Oh, because the girls are so jealous, and I want to prove that I do not monopolize all the good-looking men." Browne satisfied, but not so happy as he expected to be.
